1. Fashion on Film

What could be the latest trend for the summer? You may be surprised to hear that it won't be something you can wear. Recently, high profile photographers and fashionistas are getting together to produce Fashion Videos. If you want to get a feel for the way the clothes actually look but you can't make it to the catwalk shows, this is the next best thing. Not only are the gorgeous clothes on view, but it looks like a visually stunning shoot come to life. Perhaps in the future we'll have an MTV running stylish fashion vids all day long. Sounds like heaven.

2. British punk godmother Vivienne Westwood will opining in this August at Shanghai China. It's as summer breeze from England bring British Style to this modern city. This area might be a real "top business circle".

3. Kate Moss Wedding

Kate Moss drew inspiration from 1920's icon Zelda Fitzgerald, wearing an ethereal Galliano gown sprinkled with gold leaf embroidery and sequins. Her vintage look charmed star guests including Jude Law, Anna Wintour and Sir Paul McCartney. Groom, Jamie Hince from band 'The Kills' was dapper in a pale blue YSL suit and just a little grunge in chocolate brown boots. He would have needed those boots for the three day party that followed.

4. 3D Fashion

Whilst seeing a movie in 3D is fun, it isn't fashionable. Until now. Ingridhal is launching James Dean-esque circular glasses that inject some style into the 3D experience. Twin sisters Kine and Einy Paulsen are behind Ingridhal, a new brand that mixes fashion, technology and entertainment and say their designs are perfect "either on a date or just hanging out with friends".

5. Solar backpack

A man carries a backpack equipped with a solar panel and a portable battery that can recharge cell phones and laptop computers, at the Design Products Fair in Tokyo this week.

6. Mulberry Millions

Coinciding with a renewed romance for British royalty, English label Mulberry has bagged more profits than any other fashion house in recent years. With fashion insiders heaping praise on the new autumn/winter 2011 range, Mulberry's must-have status will last well beyond Will and Kate's honeymoon.

7. What happened ... ?

"Amy Winehouse was found dead Saturday in her London home, police said.

It is suspected that she died from a drug overdose. Winehouse fame with the album "Back to Black," whose blend of jazz, soul, rock and classic pop. It won five Grammys and made Winehouse one of music's most recognizable stars."

PLUS NEWS

North east Japan is still very much feeling the devastating effects of the March 11 earthquake and tsunami and will continue to do so for a long time. The death toll has reached 13,000 and is expected to rise further. More than 15,000 are missing. 30,000 are living in temporary shelters. En Vie, a Japan based publication, deems it necessary to remind readers of this very desperate and very real tragedy and convey this call for help. We appreciate your thoughts and any donation you can give to help the victims of this ongoing disaster.

ANYA @ M.A.C

To meet Australian designer Christine Tang is to be faced with a tiny, yet powerful, force of nature.

She is as vivacious and charming as her label, Story by Tang. This young Australian label has garnered much respect and plenty of accolades during its relatively short life.

Story by Tang was launched in 2002, immediately after Ms Tang graduated from a local fashion college. The label, catering to young females from 16 to 35, is a "...distinctive and stylish alternative to other more commercial labels" Ms Tang explains.

"It features mainly trans-seasonal pieces that have built a strong following with the cool kids from the 'MTV generation'."

The label includes distinctive key pieces of elegant-chic party dresses, liquid tops, layered tutu miniskirts, street savvy printed T-shirts and practical, tailored jackets.

In October 2004, Ms Tang was invited to participate in her first national group show - New Generation at autumn-winter Mercedes Australian Fashion Week. Here, many domestic and international buyers placed orders with Story by Tang.

The following year she won in the Directional Day-wear Category, at Western Australia's Design Awards, the Colonnade WA Designer of the Year and an A-3 motor vehicle sponsorship from Audi.

In April 2006, Story by Tang was invited to showcase in a Ready-to-Wear show at spring-summer Mercedes Australia Fashion Week. Here, the label expanded its market into Canada and London.

For Spring/Summer 2011 a luxurious jersey basics range was launch to compliment Story by Tang's much loved Ready-to-Wear collection.

Recently, the label has evolved into a respected international representation of the unique style Western Australia has to offer. It focuses on an artistic and distinctive look which clients chose to wear in order to stand out in a crowd.

Crafty digital and misty prints teamed with spunky colours mold this season's foray of new designs.

Story by Tang's latest collection includes beautiful silk fluid dresses and bold separates that deliver an edgy yet feminine look. Crafty digital and misty prints teamed with spunky colours mold this season's foray of new designs. With many stockists in Australia and growing recognition internationally, this is definitely a up-and-coming label to watch.

Although Ms Tang has her eye on Japan, for now you will have to be satisfied with buying from reputed online boutiques, such as www.pitbullmansion.com and www.stylepalace.com.au

PHOTOGRAPHY MADE IN GERMANY MARCO BÜHL

This month we're introducing an up and coming German photographer, Marco Bühl. Four years ago photography was merely his hobby, but after realizing the passion he felt taking photos, it quickly became his profession. Now he focuses on showing his extraordinary ideas, creative style and unique vision.

The following photo collection is from "Planet MELT", an Electro festival in Germany. The "models" are people who attended the event, selected from the crowd and the set is the operation room at the event.

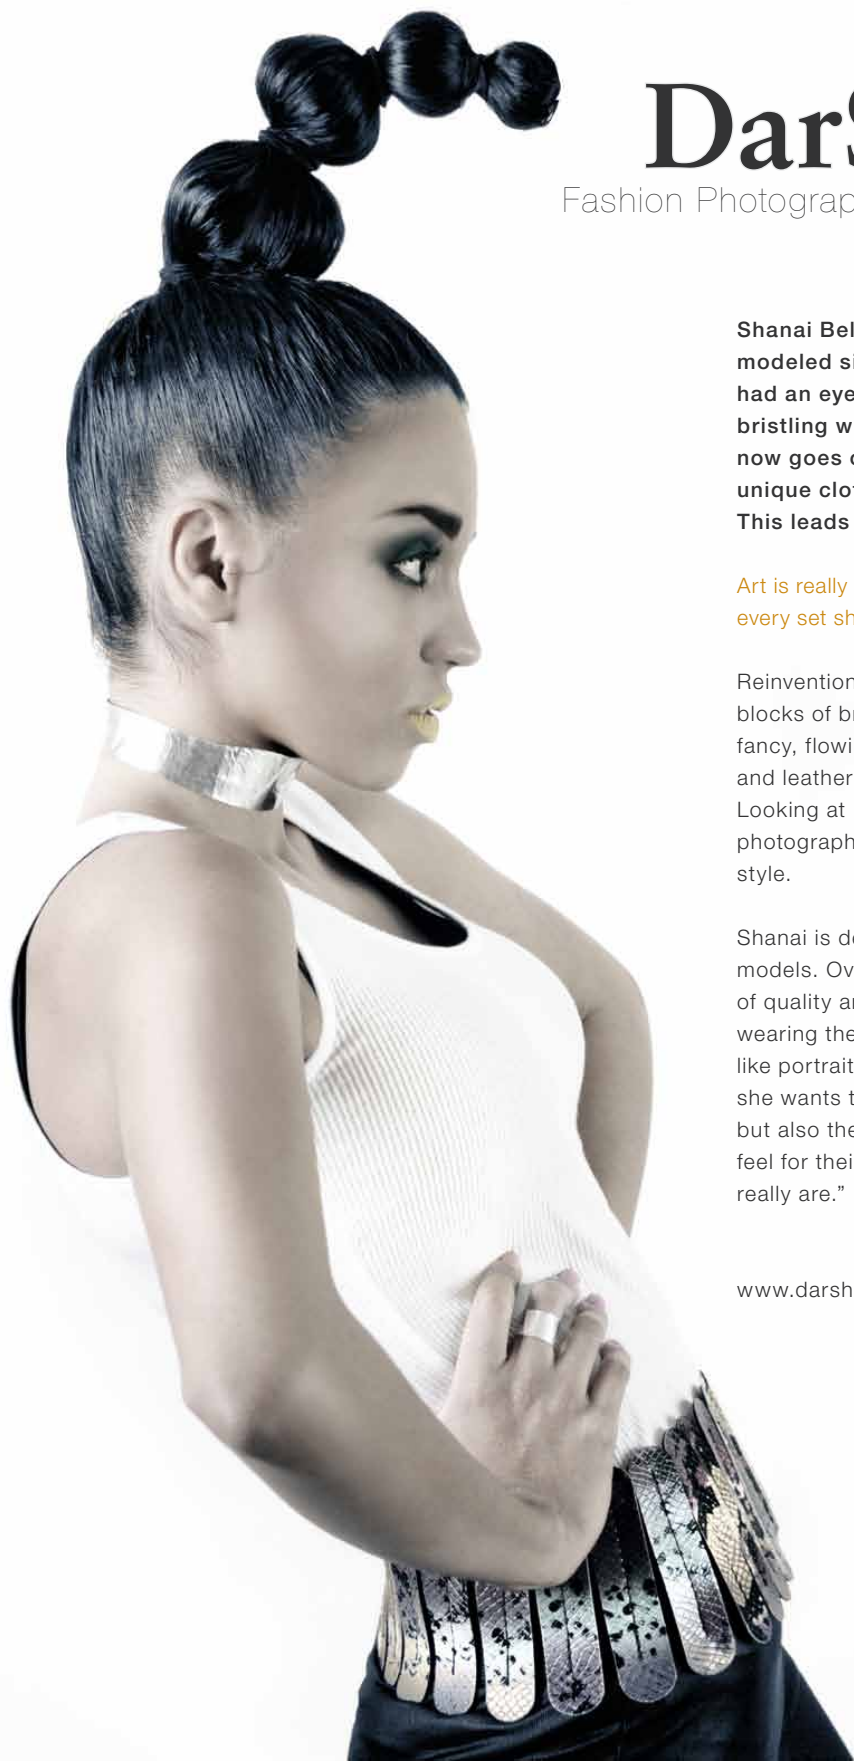

"It was a great experience" says Marco "even though the models were not professional, it worked out extremely well".

Marco Bühl, 35, currently resides in Göttingen, working for several agencies all over Germany.

Everyone at En Vie hopes to see more of his work soon. Stay tuned as we begin to showcase more German fashion photography and designers in the near future.

Make Up Artist
CARMEL ANT
www.carmelant.com

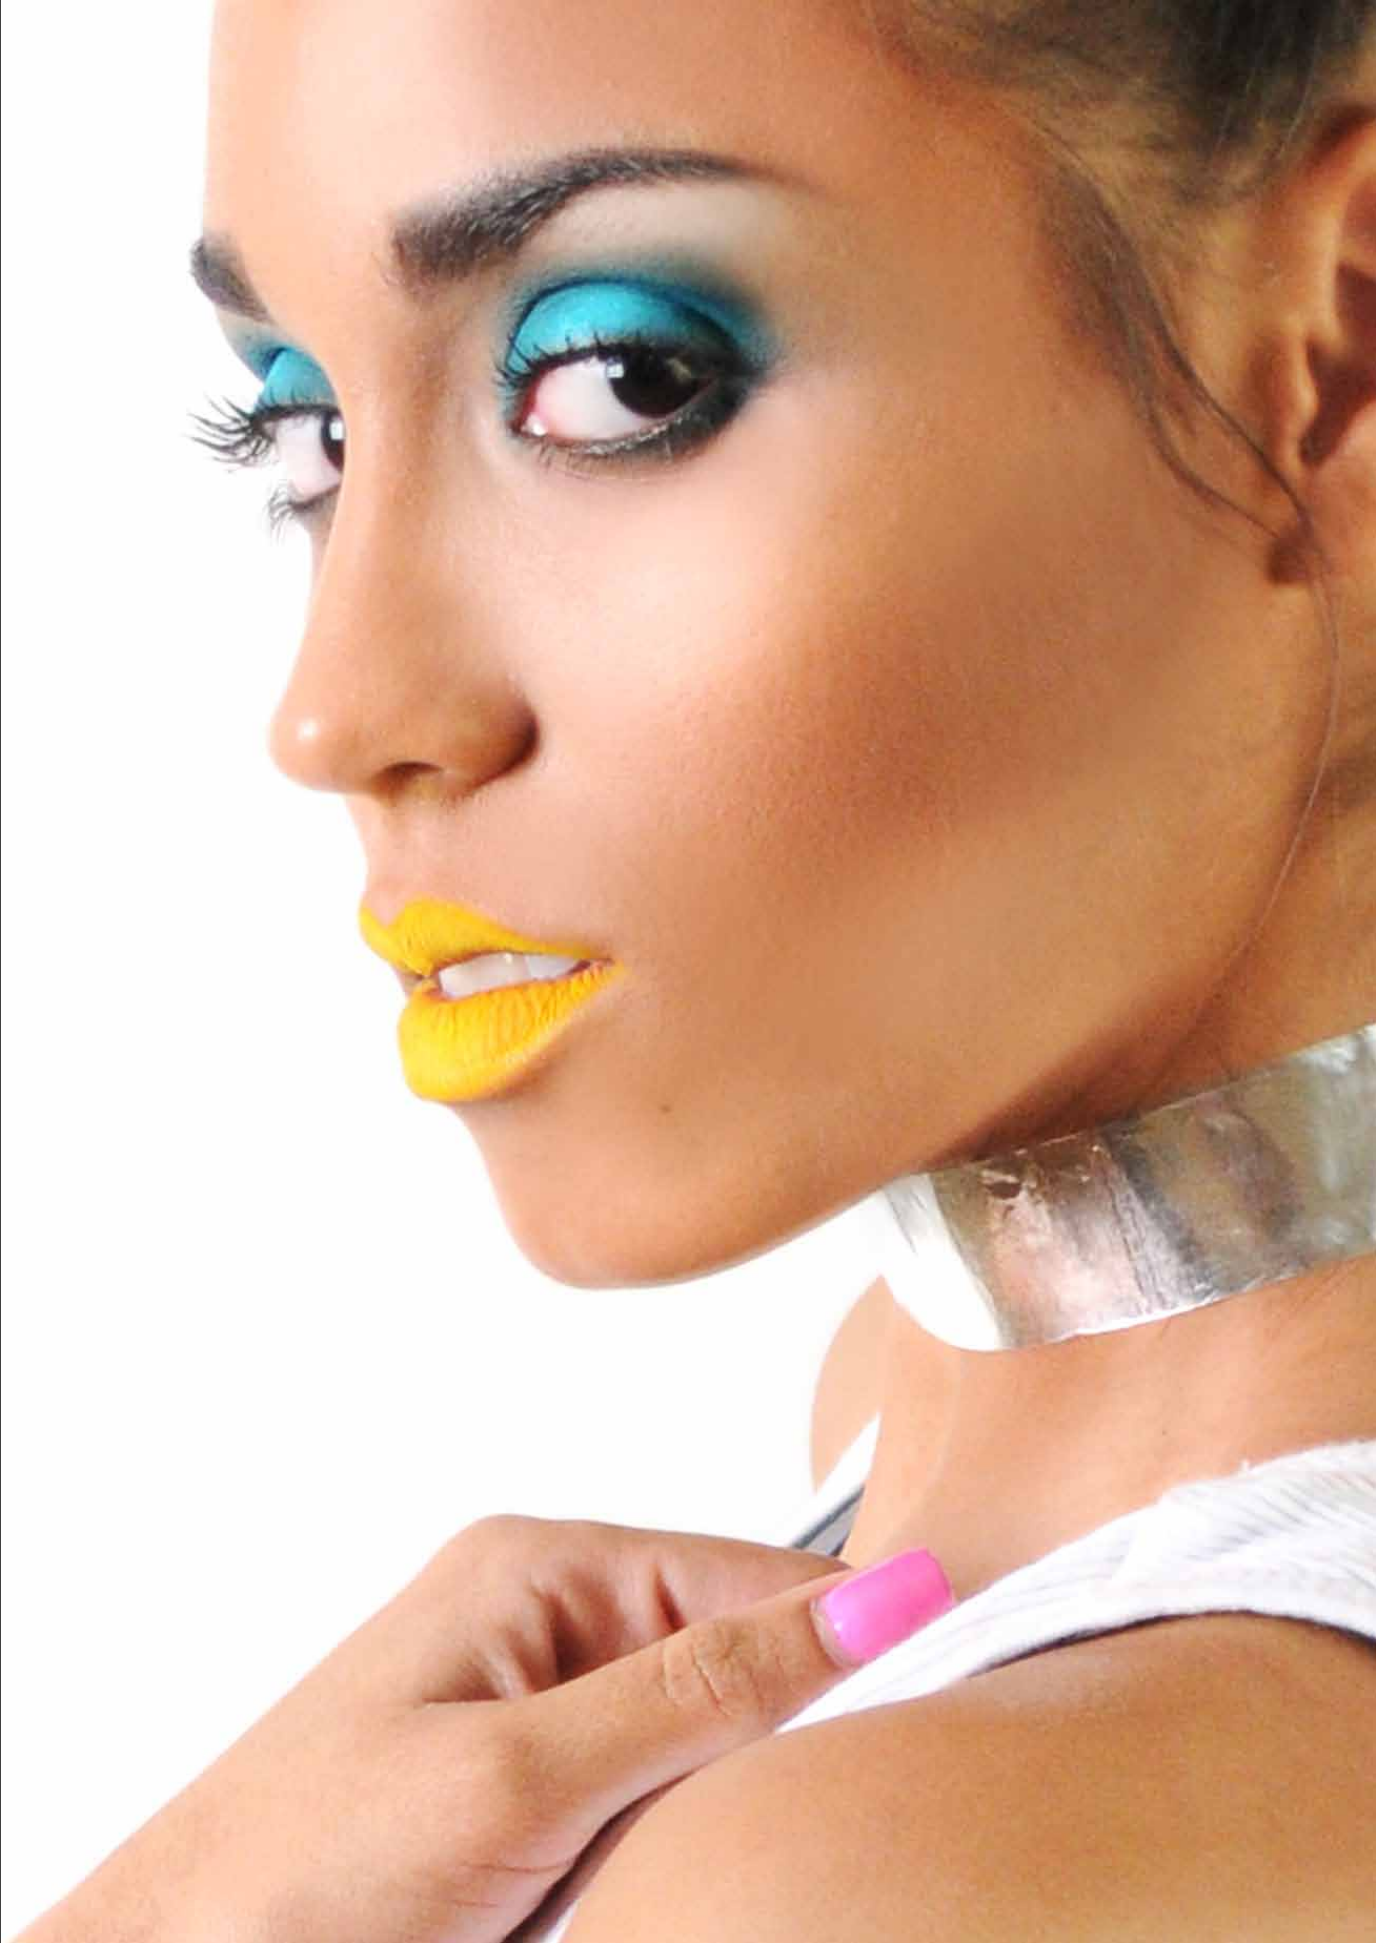

Shanai Belton lives fashion. Having modeled since the age of 18, she has always had an eye for interesting shoots and was bristling with ideas. Inspired by this, she now goes out of her way to find different or unique clothes for her glamorous concepts. This leads to some impressive results.

Art is really what she feels it is all about and with every set she wants to try something different.

Reinvention takes many forms: Tight, bright blocks of brassy colour; Intimate portraits in fancy, flowing forms; Creased pattern dresses and leather jackets forming a faux-retro style. Looking at her pictures is like five different photographers. Every picture has a different style.

Shanai is dedicated to her art and to her models. Over all of her work there is a sense of quality and vision, in the depictions of those wearing the outfits. Real life people stand out, like portraits. Right from the start, Shanai says she wants to show more than just the clothes, but also the models as well. "You have to get a feel for their personality and capture who they really are."

NutMeg Couture is an exclusive couture evening gown service based in Glasgow founded by in-house designer Megan Cuthbertson.

During her time at University Megan completed numerous commissions for proms, weddings and other formal occasions as well as working alongside a Glasgow based couture bridal company.

After graduating with her BA in Fashion Business she secured a job with the bridal company as assistant designer/machinist before branching out on her own. Utilising everything she had learned and experienced she progressed to establish NutMeg Couture in October 2010 at the tender age of 21.

Offering both custom made and off-the-peg gowns NutMeg Couture delivers nothing but the best in quality and service and has been recognised throughout Glasgow. Since the official launch Megan has fashioned dresses for a variety of black tie events, most notable of which are 2 gowns designed for the Glasgow finalist in the Miss Great Britain Pageant. Co-ordinating with several local talents Megan and her gowns have been involved in a number of exclusive events and shoots including hair-stylist fashion shows, music videos and charity balls and as such she has developed an impressive clientele list for such young company.

NutMeg Couture's designs take inspiration from the 1950's era where simple lines and exaggerated silhouettes are used to enhance the natural curves of a woman. The unique and sleek designs exude sexy sophistication creating ever-classic pieces that hold a touch of pure elegance. NutMeg Couture ... Where originality meets sophistication.

EMILIANO ALBANESE

When you think of shopping in Argentina, the first thing that comes to mind is leather.

Originally worn by Argentine cowboys in the fields in the 18th century, now Buenos Aires is saturated with luxury leather products. If you're looking for something more unique, Escudo Prana has the goods. The brand, developed by Buenos Aires-born designer Emiliano Albanese, offers a gorgeous collection: Handmade leather accessories that combines rustic Argentine aesthetics with a contemporary twist.

The 38-year-old ex-model Albanese sums up his range of leather accessories with “Quién se acerque verá” which literally means “Whoever gets close will see.” And the moment you smell and finger the buttery leather of one of his handcrafted bags or wallets and note every intricate detail – the printed silk linings and the silver-plated metal hardware – it’s love at first sight.

Everything is lovingly hand crafted by Albanese himself in his atelier in Quilmes, Buenos Aires – from cutting the cowhide to applying the individually stamped metal hardware. Only the most exotic materials will do, including leather and cowhide from Argentina, chic black Italian pony hair, iguana skin and a special zebu hide. In fact, the crossbreed striped leather has become a signature of the brand.

Unconcerned by trends and seasons, the self-taught Albanese sets out to create timeless pieces. For Albanese, this isn't just fashion, they also represent a philosophy on life. The name Escudo Prana is symbolic of the spirit of the brand, inspired by a spiritual experience in Mexico. “Prana” translates as vital life energy while “Escudo” means “shield” in Spanish. According to the designer, “To carry an Escudo Prana product is to carry, nourish and protect yourself with good energy.”

Armed with one of Escudo Prana's bags, you'll be ready to take on the fashion world.

Bespoke Perfume

Pictures
DR. HANY HARRAS

Dr. Hany Harras has spent many years working in the bespoke perfume sector; he has a passion for the art and technology of perfumery and is the innovator behind 'Bespoke', a new concept in luxury bespoke perfume development.

Dr. Harras decided to launch Bespoke after observing that luxury sector consumers are often exposed to similar brand experiences and are not given the opportunity to experience custom perfumes.

"In the luxury arena, consumers are easily able to access custom specialists in different areas from fashion to shoes, handbags, and many other items, so why not perfumes?" says Harras.

The experience of creating your own bespoke fragrance is a detailed one; the client has the opportunity to choose from more than 25 olfactory families and try hundreds of essential oils and aromatic ingredients. The client is guided throughout the whole process in order to select the proper ingredients that suit his or her personality and to position each ingredient in its specific note (top, heart, and base). After some discussion regarding the notes selected, they are blended together under the supervision of a professional perfumer to create the ultimate scent to suit your personality.

'The moment you smell your perfume, you will discover yourself and you will hear yourself saying, 'Oh, it's me!''

Dr. Harras explained how the approximately 60,000,000 olfactory receptors in the human nose differentiate between one smell and another and how the brain creates a link between a smell and a memory.

Retailer: DON'T TELL FANNY!

Don't Tell Fanny is a small fashion boutique in Brisbane. Paige Lovell is the proud owner, and loves to make people look and feel good with outfits designed and created by local emerging designers. The designs are incredibly unique, fashionable and super-chic, and will definitely put a smile on your face.

Where does your inspiration for the shop come from?

My inspiration comes from clothes. I love clothes and have always loved shopping. I feel that clothes are like art or chocolate. They give you hope, happiness, and best of all can really make someone feel great! It's the feeling that's clothes can create which I really love. They just make me so happy.

What is the age group does your shop aim for?

The shops main market is 15-30 but we do have women of all ages shopping with us- often 3 generations. Daughter, mother and grandmother.

What defines your personal style?

My personal style is a bit left of centre. I love clothes that show a woman's best assets and disguises the not-so-good parts. [I like] clothes that are a bit different and not found in every single shop; we want our girls feeling as though they are not going to go out and have 1,000 people wearing the same thing.

Who are your favorite designers?

Favorite designers. I could name 100, mostly Australian designers that are doing things a little differently, for example Maurie & Eve, Sumakhi, Bless'ed, The Meek, Nookie, and Arnhem. We also support local emerging talent too. Lots of our designers also make their clothes in Australia, which I think is a really good thing to keep local. If the clothes are manufactured abroad, they make sure they are not made in sweat shops. They also don't pump out thousands of the same shirt top in 10 different colors.

Future plans for Don't Tell Fanny?

Future plans for the shop. I would love to have another one and an online shop. I'd like to have a group of stores and run around between them. I just love being in-store; we really are like a little family. I have always been talkative, we have made so many close friends with girls that come into Don't Tell Fanny.

NICCI.N.

Folds and ruffles, flowing and organic shapes, clipped short and extended.

These are struck by bold lines and hard shapes and cut off before they become too formulaic. Hoods, shoulders and ruffs, puffy skirts and long long woolen stockings add details and train the eye all over the outfit. The waists are pinched. Printed cotton is outlined in thick black binding. Athenian maxi dresses are offset with long dark cardigans.

Where would you expect this collection came from? The hip streets of Tokyo or New York? The edgy catwalks of Berlin or Paris? Not even close.

This was the work of a new designer out of Scotland, Nicola Napier. Inspired by her grandmother's skills at dressmaking, she has been pursuing a dream to make affordable and unique clothing. Nicola's clothes are generating interest in her home town of Edinburgh and have already been commissioned by local shops.

Aside from designing for her own label nicci.n and creating designs for local shops, she is also working with Sakura Scotland, using their unique Japanese-inspired tartans to create a cross-cultural collection. There are four tartans symbolising the four seasons and Japanese art. We are looking forward to seeing what comes from such different cultures.

CAROLINE STAVOHAGEN

Shanghai Beauty

Recently, whilst wandering the streets, I realized that Shanghai is actually more beautiful than I thought.

There are many cities like Shanghai in China, and everyone is under the Chinese allure, but what is the real China and how is this tangibly reflected? Earlier I had interviewed a Chinese designer who had lived and worked in Italy for nearly a decade, asking about the idea of beauty. This time I had the chance to interview Caroline, a Shanghai-based French designer.

How do you find inspiration for your collection and what do you mainly sell and design?

I make knitwear and clothing for kids and women, and as of last year I also have men's knitwear. I have a lot of products for kids because I like their colourful and playful world. The shop has been open for almost 5 years now and I have a mixture of regular customers who live in Shanghai and also those that come once or twice a year from abroad. It all started because I wanted something for myself and my family and there was nothing available in the market or at very expensive prices. Being in knitwear production for many years, it was very difficult for me to buy outside, I either find prices too expensive or the quality is not good enough.

What is beauty for you? Is the outfit more attractive or the spirit? Is the bottle more important or the liquid inside?

For me, beauty comes from elegance and happiness. A smile can change everything! The outfit is important but most of all, the way you wear it. I particularly like accessories: shoes, bags, sunglasses and simple shirts with nice structural details. Jeans with a simple top can look sophisticated if accessorized well. But I agree that the more mature you become, the less important the packaging.

*For me, beauty comes from elegance and happiness.

What is beauty for Asia? Or for Europe?

It's true that everyone wants to be beautiful, west or east, but with which style? Which brand do you think is succeeding in achieving this balance?

I see Asian women associating beauty with sophistication and a lot of details. I have the feeling that in Europe, beauty is associated with a stronger sense of natural beauty and elegance. In that way, I find Hermes very representative of that concept. I also really like Marni for the elegance of their patterns, shapes and colours, beautiful but also trendy.

Caroline is like hundreds of foreigners in China who is striving to live a life through doing something they love. Talking with people like Caroline, from their smiles and their many languages, you can see the strength of their integrity, tolerance and wisdom. For fashion or for any industry, isn't this the strength that encourages the pioneers to continuously pave the way for future generations?

There is not always enough time for your crammed schedule. But, as long as you are persistent, you will get paid for your hard work and your desires may come true in the future. This month will be the perfect time for you to develop intimate relationships whether you are single or not. You are emotional and romantic by nature. Your romance will be perfectly decorated with the fragrance of wild rose and lavender.
